"DEVELOPING MEDIA RELATIONS"

Are interest rates going up? When's the best time to get a home loan? What's the state of the local economy? These are all questions being asked in print and broadcast media all over the country. Community bankers can answer all of them with expert authority. So why don't they? This session breaks down the fears and misconceptions about having a relationship with the media and shows you why local news organizations are hungrier than ever for the kind of fresh content and credible experts a community bank can provide. Presenter Patrick Dix leverages 25 years of experience as a local broadcast journalist to illustrate why developing relationships with local media and saying "yes" when they call for your help will pay off for your reputation, your business, and your bottom line.
